COMMENT OF THE DAY

SYRIAN PROBLEM

ONE of the major problems facing Western diplomats in the Middle East is whether Syria can remain independent of the Soviet bloc and they are somewhat cheered by Syrian confidence that they can.

The Syrians are apparently convinced that the receipt of Soviet arms and economic aid, and the presence of increasing numbers of East European experts will not affect their foreign policies of non-alignment in world blocs—or positive neutralism as they call it—and the promotion of Arab unity.

But the question remains not where Syria stands now, but where will she stand in a few years' time. Syria's economy, if not bound to, will at least have very close relations with the Eastern bloc in years to come owing to the trade pacts signed with the Communist countries.

A STRAIN

IN addition, Syria has for some time been receiving arms and military equipment from the Eastern bloc, but it is impossible to estimate to what extent payment for the arms deliveries represents a strain on Syrian economy.

It is believed that if Syria decides that she must keep her armed forces in a state of readiness opposite the Turkish frontier throughout the winter, this will be an extra burden on the economy.

As for the economic agreement with the Soviet Union, the first impression is that Syria is binding herself to provide—relative to her size—a huge amount of money out of her own resources and she is in no position to bear the added strain which will amount to something like the whole of the national income.

OVERTAXING

THE question therefore is whether the agreement with the Soviet Union, however firm the intentions of the Syrian leaders may be to maintain independence, will have the opposite effect of overtaxing the Syrian economy and making it dependent on the Eastern bloc.

A further point in the agreement is that the Soviet authorities decide on the prices which they will charge the Syrians for equipment and for the services rendered by their experts. This, of course, appears to be the rein on which the Russians will exert pressure whenever they deem it necessary to keep the Syrians on the predestined road leading to full control over the country's economy.

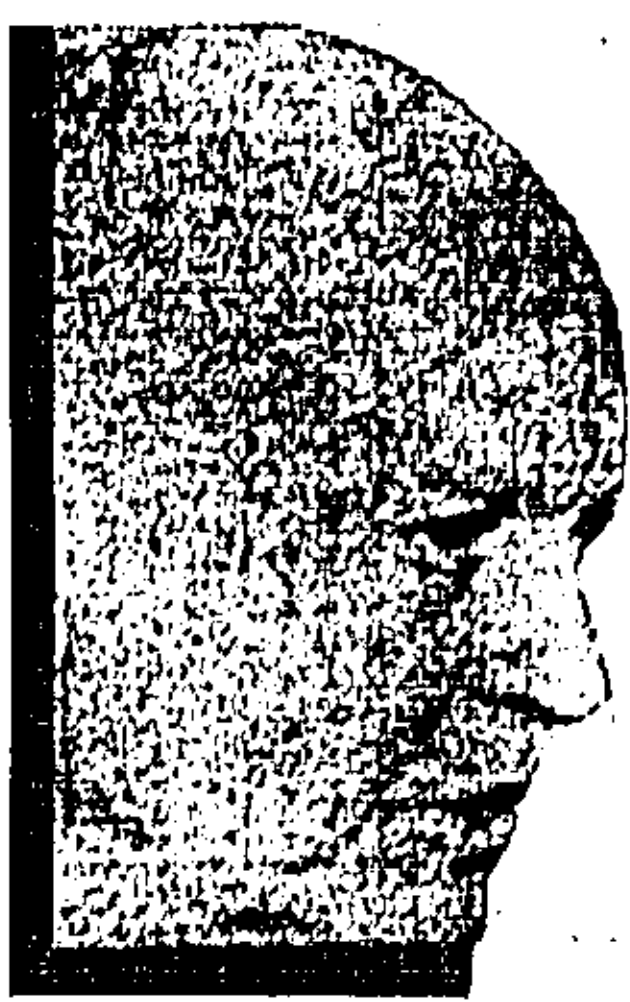

UNITED

BUT even if Syria's relations with the Eastern bloc are viewed pessimistically, there is little that can be done about it. Outwardly, at least, the Syrian Government and army leadership appears to be united as, perhaps, at any time since gaining independence of the French mandate.

In their present state of mind, Syrian leaders would be liable to view any move or initiative made by the big powers in the West as evil-intentioned and inspired by imperialism.

So for the time being, the alternative, therefore, is for the Western powers to leave Syria deliberately alone, and allow the leaders of the country to work out for themselves where their future course will lead.

IKE NOT TO ATTEND PARIS MEET

Rallying Point For Western Efforts Gone

Washington, Nov. 26. The White House announced late today that President Eisenhower will not be able to attend next month's Nato summit meeting in Paris.

The United States Government has informed the Embassies of the United States' 14 Nato allies of the cancellation of Eisenhower's trip.

No Delegation Of Presidential Authority

Washington, Nov. 26. Vice-President Richard M. Nixon said today he was confident that President Eisenhower "will recover and will resume the duties of his office."

Nixon said upon leaving the White House that the President's condition was such that he "could make decisions if necessary." He added, however, that there were "no major problems" up for decision in the next few days.

Nixon also said there had been no discussion about the delegation of any Presidential authority. He said he saw no need for any such delegation.

Nixon also said, "There is no reason for the President to step aside."

"The disability he suffered in this case is very mild, compared to similar cases," he said. Nixon said that if a decision had to be made that only the President could make it.

The Vice-President, looking grim and serious, told reporters that Attorney General William P. Rogers was at the White House mainly for discussion of legislative matters. He said Rogers "told us" there was no need for any delegation of authority.—United Press.

The President's physical strength is normal and he is allowed to be up and about his home. Home surroundings are considered preferable to the hospital, for recovery.

"He is alert, his spirits are good, and he discussed with interest and clarity recent events. The present disability is mild and transitory in nature. We feel that the original recommendation for rest and decrease in physical activity should be followed."

The White House supplemented the medical bulletin with a statement by Mrs. Anne Whitson, acting Press Secretary, saying:

"All attending physicians and consultants are agreed that the President has not had another heart attack and that the present symptoms have no relationship to his previous heart attack."

Got well messages poured into the White House from world leaders. Nato members, United Nations Assembly members, Senators and Representatives of both American parties, as well as Pope Pius XII, and former President, Harry Truman.—All Agencies.

President Eisenhower's brain occlusion caused a sharp downgrading in diplomatic circles tonight of the expectations held for the King of Morocco's discussions in Washington.

Ike Is Not Suffering From Heart Attack

Washington, Nov. 26. The text of the 2345 GMT medical bulletin issued by President Eisenhower's neurological consultants, Doctors Francis Forster, Houston Merritt, James Hammill and Lt-Col. Roy Clauson:

"The President has had an occlusion of a small branch of a cerebral vessel which has produced a slight difficulty in speaking. There is no evidence of a cerebral hemorrhage or any serious lesion of the cerebral vessels."

The difficulty in speaking has improved over the period of the last 24 hours and is now manifested only by a hesitancy in saying certain difficult words. Reading, writing and reasoning powers are not affected.

The President's physical strength is normal and he is allowed to be up and about his home. Home surroundings are considered preferable to the hospital, for recovery.

"He is alert, his spirits are good, and he discussed with interest and clarity recent events. The present disability is mild and transitory in nature. We feel that the original recommendation for rest and decrease in physical activity should be followed."

The White House supplemented the medical bulletin with a statement by Mrs. Anne Whitson, acting Press Secretary, saying:

"All attending physicians and consultants are agreed that the President has not had another heart attack and that the present symptoms have no relationship to his previous heart attack."

President Eisenhower's brain occlusion caused a sharp downgrading in diplomatic circles tonight of the expectations held for the King of Morocco's discussions in Washington.

Informants said the talks King Mohammed V. came here to conduct no longer had the same significance now that the President was too ill to see him.

They said it appeared certain that Mr. Eisenhower would not be able to meet with the monarch before the latter leaves Washington on Friday morning for a tour of the United States.—United Press.

either a majority or minority Government, owing to the lack of confidence among the parties concerned.

A-BOMBER BASE IN CYPRUS SABOTAGED

Nicosia, Nov. 26. Britain's £12,000,000 atom bomber base at Akrotiri, Cyprus, was tonight swept by giant fires, reportedly started by Cypriot-Greek saboteurs as a gesture of defiance on the second anniversary of the application of British emergency anti-terrorist laws.

It was officially stated that one "Canberra" bomber was totally burned out and four other planes—three "Canberras" and one "Venom"—were damaged in the blaze, now reported to be under control.

A Royal Air Force spokesman said sabotage was "definitely suspected."

Three fire brigades were fighting the fire which was visible miles away from the base—Britain's newest in the Middle East.

Elsewhere in Cyprus, today was marked by demonstrations by thousands of angry Cypriot-Greeks.

In Nicosia, steel-helmeted riot squads used teargas to disperse demonstrators protesting against continuation of the emergency regulations.

Ten Cypriot women detainees held as terrorist suspects began a 24-hour hunger strike at the Central Prison here as a protest against the regulations.

In Famagusta several British Military policemen were reported slightly injured when Cypriot-Greek demonstrators stoned them.—France-Press and Reuters.

The alleged incident—latest in the long tug-of-war between France and Tunisia over Tunisian support of the Algerian rebellion—occurred yesterday, the reports said.

According to these reports the Italian freighter Campidano was stopped in the Gulf of Tunis, her master was questioned, the ship minutely searched and only then allowed to proceed.

Today the Tunisian Information Department announced that Bahl Ladgham, Secretary of State to President Habib Bourguiba, and Deputy Foreign Minister Bahl Mokaddem, received the French Minister, M. Benard, today, and "expressed their protests."—United Press.

Aden, Nov. 26. The agricultural adviser to the Aden Government, Mr. R. C. Maxwell-Darling, and his party were fired on by dissident tribesmen while driving through Dirjaj in the Fudhail Sultanate, western Aden, the Government announced here today.

The Government statement said that apart from a slight grazed forehead by Maxwell-Darling, all the occupants of the Land Rover, in which they were riding, were uninjured.

West New Guinea Resolution Adopted By UN

United Nations, Nov. 26. The United Nations Political Committee adopted today a resolution favouring a new attempt by Indonesia and the Netherlands to settle their eight-year-old argument over West New Guinea.

The vote of 42 to 28 for the resolution fell short of the two-thirds majority required for final approval by the General Assembly. Eleven delegations abstained from voting.

Indonesia had worked for adoption of the resolution as a means to get the Dutch to resume negotiation.

THE GROUNDS

Indonesia claims West New Guinea, which it calls West Irian, on the grounds that the Dutch should have ceded the territory along with the rest of the East Indies in 1948.

The Netherlands had vigorously opposed the resolution, contending that Indonesia has no valid claim to the Pacific Island territory and that there are no grounds for negotiation on the issue.

The Dutch had held no hope of blocking the measure in the Political Committee. A Dutch spokesman said that, even allowing for the possibility that some votes will be switched, it has no chance of getting a two-thirds majority in the General Assembly.

Finally, it would bring back the West Irian question in the 1958 General Assembly. Tonight's vote split the Latin-American group between the pro-Dutch and pro-Indonesian camps and found the United States abstaining.

The Nato nations except the United States voted with their Dutch ally, and the Asian-African group, including Japan, voted with Indonesia.—United Press and Reuters.

Finland still without a Government

Helsinki, Nov. 26. Professor Eino Saari, leader of the Finnish Liberal Party, today informed President Urho Kekkonen that he had been unable to form a new cabinet to end Finland's 40-day-old Government crisis.

Professor Saari said he had found it impossible to form

either a majority or minority Government, owing to the lack of confidence among the parties concerned.

So far, three fruitless attempts to form a Government have been made following the confidence motion which toppled the Coalition Government of Dr. V. J. Rakshishan.

(Astrarian) on October 15 and caused the country's 15th Government crisis since the war.

Political circles in Helsinki have suggested that it may be necessary to dissolve Parliament and hold new elections early next year.

Attacked By Tribe

Aden, Nov. 26. The agricultural adviser to the Aden Government, Mr. R. C. Maxwell-Darling, and his party were fired on by dissident tribesmen while driving through Dirjaj in the Fudhail Sultanate, western Aden, the Government announced here today.

East Germans Tighten Border Controls

Berlin, Nov. 26. A West Berlin private intelligence organisation said today the Communists plan to tighten their controls along the East-West German border.

The anti-Communist "Information Bureau West" said the East German Interior Ministry has ordered border police to strengthen border barriers to prevent Soviet Zone residents from fleeing to the West.

The Communists have a network of ditches, barbed-wire entanglements, and observation towers along the border.

TRAITORS

The official Communist Party newspaper Neues Deutschland today demanded stiff punishment for those who "recruit" East Germans for flight to the West.

It denounced refugees as traitors. The Communist campaign to halt the refugee flow has caused fears that the Communists might interfere with East-West Berlin elevated railway traffic.

However, Bruno Baum, head of the East Berlin Communist Party, in a speech to railway workers, released today said such reports were "lies."

Assembly To Decide On Crisis HOME RULE FOR ALGERIA?

A Special Welcome

Sputnik's Rocket To Fall In Flames

Cambridge (Mass.),

Nov. 26.

Dr. Fred Whipple, Director of the Smithsonian Institution observatory, said that it is possible that the launching rocket of the first Sputnik will fall in flames next Sunday.

Dr. Whipple said the rocket would catch fire when it struck the upper layers of the atmosphere at 35 or 40 miles altitude. If this happened at night, he said, the rocket's fall would undoubtedly be extremely spectacular.

It happened during the daytime, it might also be seen, for the rocket might produce a thin trail of smoke which would be visible in the air.

Dr. Whipple said the friction of the air should cause a fusion of the external metallic parts of the rocket while leaving the engine body intact.

He said that since two-thirds of the earth's surface was covered with water, it was likely that the enormous piece of metal would fall somewhere at sea. — France-Press.

Goans Stage A Peaceful Demonstration

Bombay, Nov. 26.

A small crowd of Goan nationalists staged a peaceful demonstration in front of the office of the Assistant High Commissioner for Pakistan in Bombay today in protest against the Pakistan Government's policy of supporting Portugal's claim on Goa, Daman and Diu.

The demonstration was organized jointly by three Goan nationalist parties. The demonstrators submitted a memorandum to the Assistant High Commissioner, expressing their resentment at Pakistan's support of Portugal "against the wishes of the Goan people who are fighting for their liberation." — France-Press.

France Begins The Big Debate On Bill

Paris, Nov. 26.

The French National Assembly began debate this afternoon on the law designed to give limited home rule to Algeria.

The debate, crucial in that it comes on the eve of the Algerian debate in the United Nations General Assembly, began at 3 p.m. (1400 GMT) this afternoon.

Premier Felix Gaillard is expected to ask for a confidence vote on the law, possibly at the end of the week.

Predictions right now are that he will win and that the law will be passed, although an earlier version was thrown out by the Assembly last September.

However, the deputies are believed unwilling to open a new Government crisis now. Although many of them are opposed to the bill, they will probably accept it.

Mediation

The biggest issue in the Assembly, however, was not the

"Lol-Cadre," but the mediation offer last week of President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia and King Mohammed V of Morocco.

This morning the powerful Conservative Party said in a declaration that there should be no negotiations, "direct or indirect," until there has been a cease-fire in Algeria.

They implied that if there was, they would vote against the Government.

The Pierre Mendes-France wing of Gaillard's Radical Party on the other hand, voted last week that the Government should consider the Bourguiba-Mohammed V offer of negotiation.

The chances of a cease-fire at this stage are so dim as to be almost non-existent unless there are major and unexpected concessions by the French and the rebels. — United Press.

STATE DEPARTMENT CONFIRMS ROW IN OKINAWA

Washington, Nov. 26.

A State Department spokesman confirmed today the news dispatches from Naha (Okinawa) according to which the United States officials on this island had concurred to bring about the changes in the local laws that resulted in the ousting of the Leftist Mayor of Naha, Mr. Kamejiro Senaga.

The United States authorities had seen in the continued administration of Mr. Senaga a threat to the maintenance of peace in the island and a possible danger for the future of the huge American base established on Okinawa.

The State Department spokesman refused today to comment further on this incident saying it was a matter for the Defense Department.

COMMENT

Asked to comment on the students' demonstrations against the United States Embassy in Tokyo, the official spokesman said he had heard of no injury to American officials during those demonstrations.

Mr. Senaga's dismissal took place when four representatives of the Japanese Diet are in Washington on an official mission in favour of the return of Okinawa to Japan.

The United States official position remains, as often stated by President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles, while the residual sovereignty over this island still remains Japanese, the United States thinks it paramount to keep a base there as long as the international situation in the Far East remains tense. — France-Press.

Seamen Freed

Georgetown, Nov. 26.

Ten Pakistani seamen were freed here today from charges of deserting their ship and wilfully disobeying lawful commands. Twenty others were freed from similar charges last week.

The men complained of "horrible" working conditions on the British Admiralty oil tanker "Wayo Governor" and refused to rejoin the ship. — France-Press.

BOY KILLS THREE IN A RAGE

Bentonville, Ark., Nov. 26.

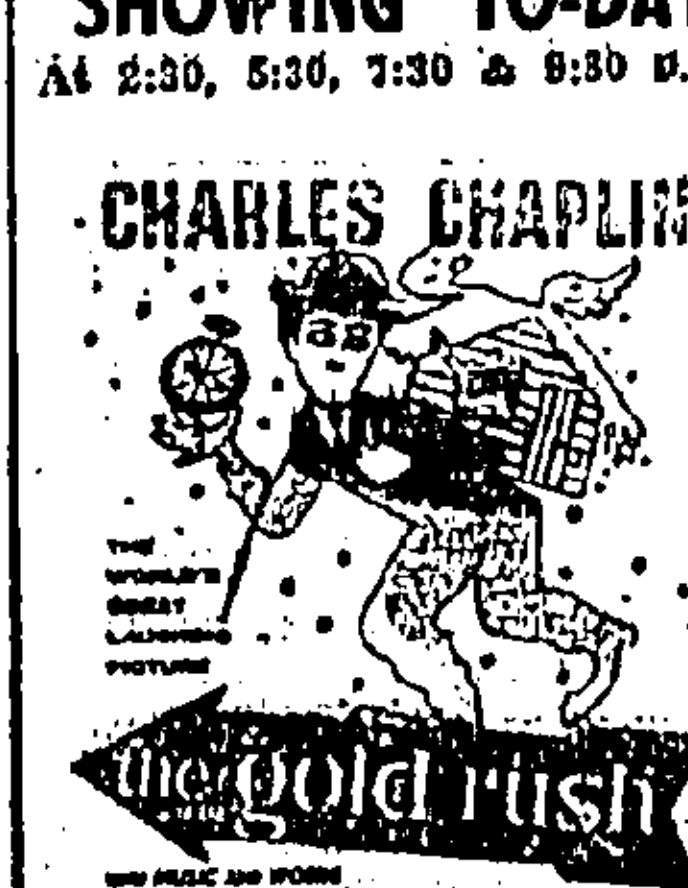

A 13-year-old American boy, who resented being ordered to attend to the cows before going to school today, killed his mother and infant brother and sister, then tried to shoot himself, the police reported here.

The boy, Gary Bright, was asked by his mother to attend to the cows as his father, who recently had a hand amputated as a result of an accident, was in hospital.

In a rage, the boy shot and killed his 34-year-old mother. He next killed his three-year-old brother Bobby, and his five-year-old sister Carol as they lay sleeping in their beds.

The boy then put a bullet through his own chest, and though injured, dragged himself some 200 yards to the neighbouring farm. — France-Press.

Tokyo, Nov. 26. A leading Thai educator predicted today that everyone in the world will look alike by the year 2500.

Bulganin Sends A Stern Note On Mid-East Tension

Moscow, Nov. 26. Russia has warned Turkey that the "maintenance of a dangerous tension" on the Syrian border could lead to other "interested states" adopting measures "toward an effective maintenance of peace in this region."

In a note signed by Premier Nikolai Bulganin and handed to Turkish Foreign Minister, Fatin Zorlu, in Ankara yesterday, the Soviet Union said:

"The Turkish Government should have taken into consideration the fact that the maintenance of a dangerous tension in this region and an obvious desire to continue to exert pressure on Syria could compel states interested in the maintenance of a stable peace in the Near and Middle East to adopt measures directed towards an effective maintenance of peace in this region."

The Russian note was in answer to a September 30 message from Turkish Premier Adnan Menekler to the effect that Turkey had no aggressive designs on Syria.

Bulganin's note said: "The Soviet Union is sincerely interested in the establishment of the very best and friendly relations with her neighbour, Turkey."

"At the same time it is sincerely and ardently interested in preventing armed aggression against independent states of the Near and Middle East from any quarter and in the maintenance of a stable peace in this region."

"The USSR sees in the maintenance of peace and prevention of aggression the most important condition for peaceful co-existence between states and a guarantee for ensuring the interests of the security of the Soviet Union, situated as it is, in close proximity to this region and as Turkey's neighbour."

"Unselfish"

Referring to Turkey's renunciation to Russia about selling arms to some Arab states, Marshal Bulganin said Russia gave Turkey arms and ammunition in the twenties when Ataturk was fighting for Turkey's freedom.

The note asked why Turkey now objected to Russia's supplying "similar unselfish aid" to the Arab states who "did not and do not represent any danger to Turkey."

The note said Russia "values" her friendship with Turkey but

"is unwilling to pay for it at the price of refusing to support the national independence of Eastern states and, particularly, the state of the Arab East."

The note said when Turkey joined the Nato and Baghdad pacts she became "interested in the internal affairs of the Arab states to such a degree that she became, as it were, a representative of the Western powers, who are known to be colonisers in the East, from time to time she began to act, as it were, on their behalf." — United Press.

Kishi Breaks The Ice In Malaya

Singapore, Nov. 27. The Straits Times said today the visit of the Japanese Premier, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi, to Malaya, had been highly successful in breaking the ice of Malayan-Japanese relations.

The Times said the visit was too brief for serious talks, but it was surprising that Mr. Kishi seemed to have had relatively little to say about the proposed Japanese development fund for South-East Asia.

"Mr. Kishi may be tired of peddling it. The idea seems to have won few friends outside Japan, and none at all in Washington where the money is."

The Times said it seemed this idea was a long way off, and in any case it was doubtful whether Japan was willing to give the kind of aid Malaya and Singapore needed.

This was help in building industries which might compete with Japanese manufactures. — Reuter.

Doolittle's Advice On America's Missile Projects

Washington, Nov. 26. General James H. Doolittle, one of President Eisenhower's top advisers on aviation questions, today urged that American security regulations be eased to permit increased scientific co-operation between the United States and its allies.

Doolittle was testifying before the Senate committee headed by Senator Lyndon Johnson, Democratic majority leader, which is investigating the situation created by Soviet scientific and military advances over the United States.

The General suggested that a consultative overall headquarters be set up to strengthen the powers of Defence Secretary, Neil McElroy, in technological research and development.

WEAKNESSES

According to Doolittle, these headquarters would correct one of the weaknesses of the present joint Chiefs-of-staff, whose differences of views had led to delays in taking important decisions.

General Doolittle particularly singled out inter-service rivalries for sharp criticism.

General Doolittle suggested a four-point programme to catch up with Soviet technological advances.

- ★ An intensification and speed-up of scientific and technological efforts on all national levels.
- ★ A revision of the American educational system and raising professional standards of teachers.
- ★ A considerable increase in scientific co-operation with the allies of the United States.
- ★ An increase in the power of the United States Strategic Air Command, which Doolittle called a fundamental obstacle to aggression.

Doolittle attributed the American lag behind the Soviet Union to the absence of rapid decisions on important points. He also said the Soviet Union had begun its missile research in 1940, while the United States had waited until 1953 before starting.

Concerning strategic aviation, Doolittle told the Senators that:

- ★ Aviation would remain the basic weapon of the immediate future. Missiles would supplement and only gradually replace planes.
- ★ The United States Strategic Air Command was superior to its Soviet counterpart and the United States could do better if there were a substantial increase in Air Force funds.
- ★ Research should be carried out on both American intercontinental ballistic missiles, the Atlas and the Titan.
- ★ On the other hand the Pentagon should decide whether to adopt exclusively either the Army's "Jupiter" or the Air Force's rival "Thor" intermediate-range missile. — France-Press.

All members of the two military missions were guests of honour at a dinner party this evening given by General Wang Shu-ling, Chief of the Chinese General Staff. — United Press.

U.S. Is In Antarctica To Stay, He Declares

McMurdo, Antarctica, Nov. 26. The United States is in Antarctica to stay, Dr. Laurence Gould said today.

Dr. Gould, chairman of the Antarctic Committee of the U.S. National Committee for the International Geophysical Year, said the Soviet Union has announced it will remain on this ice-bound continent permanently.

"How can we withdraw now?" Dr. Gould said. "The continuation of the present programme is most important."

RUSSIANS

Dr. Gould said the Russians intend to build a station at the Pole of Inaccessibility this summer and are making a second attempt at building a station at the geomagnetic pole.

Rear Adm. George Dufek, Commander of the U.S. Navy's Operation Deepfreeze, gave a three-hour briefing yesterday to six visiting Congressmen.

Rep. Oren Harris, chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, said the briefing was "most interesting."

"Budget matters were discussed but I can only say at this stage that some important decisions will be made and soon," he said. — United Press.

Paris, Nov. 26. The Permanent Council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation met here today and discussed routine preparations for next month's Nato "summit" meeting.

A spokesman said the question of the Anglo-American arms delivery to Tunisia was discussed. It may come up on Thursday, when the Council is expected to meet again. — Reuter.

SKIES BATHED IN LIGHT

U.S. Army Rocket Fails In Flight

Washington, Nov. 26. The Defence Department announced today that an Army Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile was fired unsuccessfully at Cape Canaveral, Florida.

The Department said: "The missile failed to complete its programmed flight because of technical difficulties."

The huge missile lifted slowly from its launching pad with a brilliant yellow light boiling around its tail. At about 2,000 yards altitude it thundered straight upward with the roar of a dozen freight trains.

The yellow light bathed the sky from horizon to horizon, painting the clouds in vivid relief.

The cigar-shaped rocket picked up tremendous speed to such a high altitude that its light faded to that of a brilliant star.

BRILLIANT

Then it arched onto its side and turned brilliant again, apparently on its second stage boosted it on a horizontal plane. But this time the light turned a bluish colour.

The big rocket was visible for nearly three minutes to hundreds of persons gathered on the beach.

The Jupiter, classified as an intermediate range ballistic missile, has flown successfully for 3,600 miles at supersonic speed. Although it was designed to carry a nuclear warhead, the army also hopes to use it as a vehicle to put a 20-pound satellite into orbit around the earth sometime in January.

MOST ADVANCED

The Army Secretary, Wilber M. Brucker, last month claimed the Jupiter to be the "most advanced guided missile yet produced by the free world."

Earlier tests, he said, had been "eminently successful."

Shortly before noon, the Air Force fired a small missile that appeared to be of the pilotless-bomber type which flies slightly less than the speed of sound.

The Defence Department said it was not a "test" but refused to identify it.

Another projectile zoomed out over the Atlantic at 5:23 p.m. EST. It was believed to have been a "test vehicle." — United Press.

Norwalk, Connecticut, Nov. 26.

N. Vietnam Flays Reparation Pact

Hanoi, Nov. 26. The North Vietnam Foreign Ministry announced today that the North Vietnam Government does not recognise any agreement between the Japanese Government and the South Vietnam administration on war indemnity for the whole of Vietnam.

The Ministry statement was quoted by the Vietnamese radio.

The statement said that during the second world war, Japanese occupation troops in Indo-China had caused the Vietnamese people from north to south great losses in human lives and property.

"The Japanese Government must bear the responsibility of compensating the whole of the Vietnamese people for these tremendous losses," said the statement.

"All Vietnamese people have the right to demand the Japanese Government to compensate for damages caused by Japanese troops during wartime." — France-Press.

Advice For America?

London, Nov. 26.

The influential London Times said today that the Sputnik and the Syrian crisis have left America willing to listen to advice.

"The Administration may well take most seriously the shattering of the Eisenhower Doctrine, which was born less than a year ago in Mr. (Secretary of State John Foster) Dulles' fertile brain." The Times said in its leading editorial.

"But to the average American it is the Russian foray into the sky which casts the coldest light on state of the West." The Times said. — United Press.

Could this—

By BASIL CARDEW

I TESTED a remarkable new British invention the other day that could take the terror out of parking on jam-packed streets.

I drove a large car into a tiny space. Its back swung crabwise into the kerbside. It was quite the most eerie sensation I have had in a car to date. All thanks to a device invented by Archie Butterworth, a 45-year-old racing engine expert.

First I will tell you what happened—and then how it happened.

There was the usual line of cars parked along the kerbside and there was I in a large saloon car wanting to park it.

One small "slot" presented itself. But when I measured up I found that I would have only a foot of room to spare.

Said Archie Butterworth: "You can get into that space. It's quite simple."

Undercarriage

I followed his instructions. I drove the car into the opening with the front bumpers touching the car in front, and the back wheels out in the road at an angle of 45 degrees.

I declutched, then pressed a button on the dashboard, releasing a control valve, waited a second and engaged bottom gear. I pressed the accelerator pedal in the normal way and the whole rear of the car swung round off the road to nestle close in to the kerb.

How was it done? A form of retractable undercarriage, hydraulically operated, had come down from the back of the car, lifting the rear wheels slightly off the ground. The undercarriage was in the form of two jacks or rams, and on their ends were rubber rollers which rested on the road.

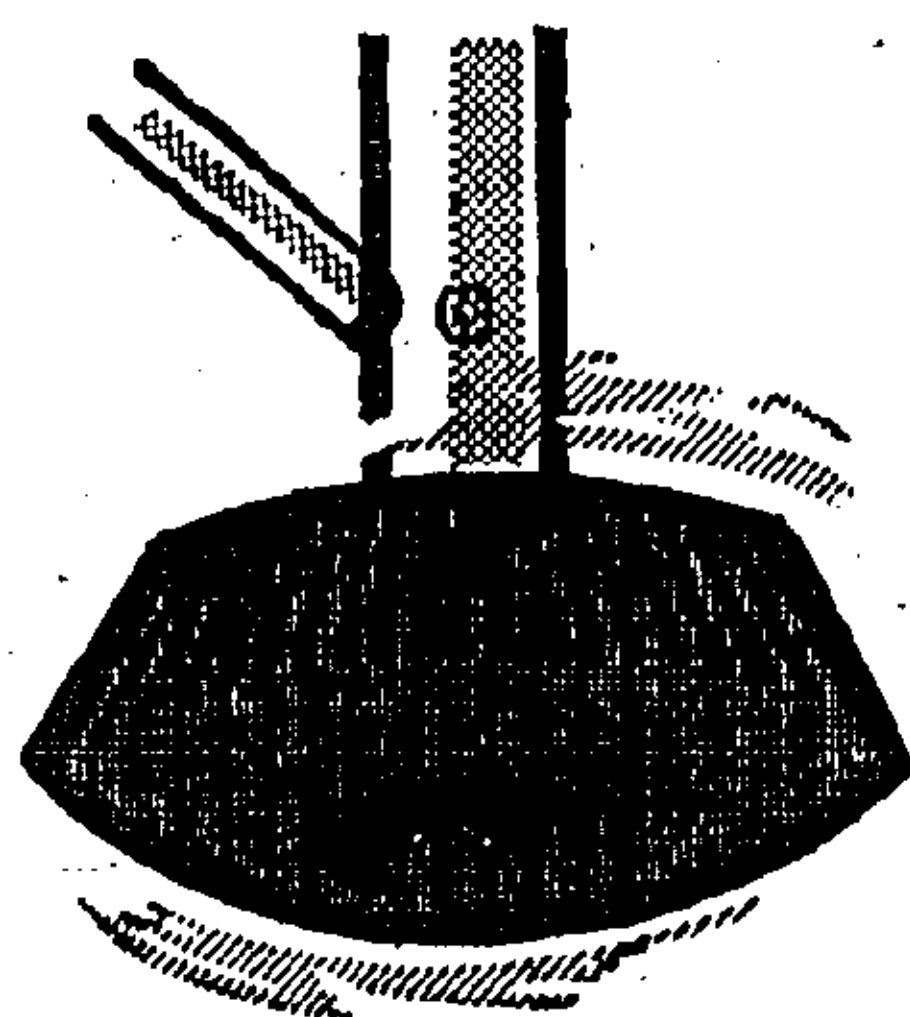

Automatically the rollers meshed against the tread of the rear wheels, so that as I pressed the throttle the back wheels rotated and in turn rotated the rollers which swung the car crabwise.

One foot spare

The car I drove was so fitted that when I engaged bottom gear the back swung to the left and in reverse gear it swung to the right. Said Mr. Butterworth: "The rubber rollers will last about the same time as a set of tyres, and can be replaced for under 10s. And the whole equipment's factory price should not be more than £10."

"We estimate that a good driver needs four feet to spare over the length of his car to get into a kerbside space, and six feet when it is a big car."

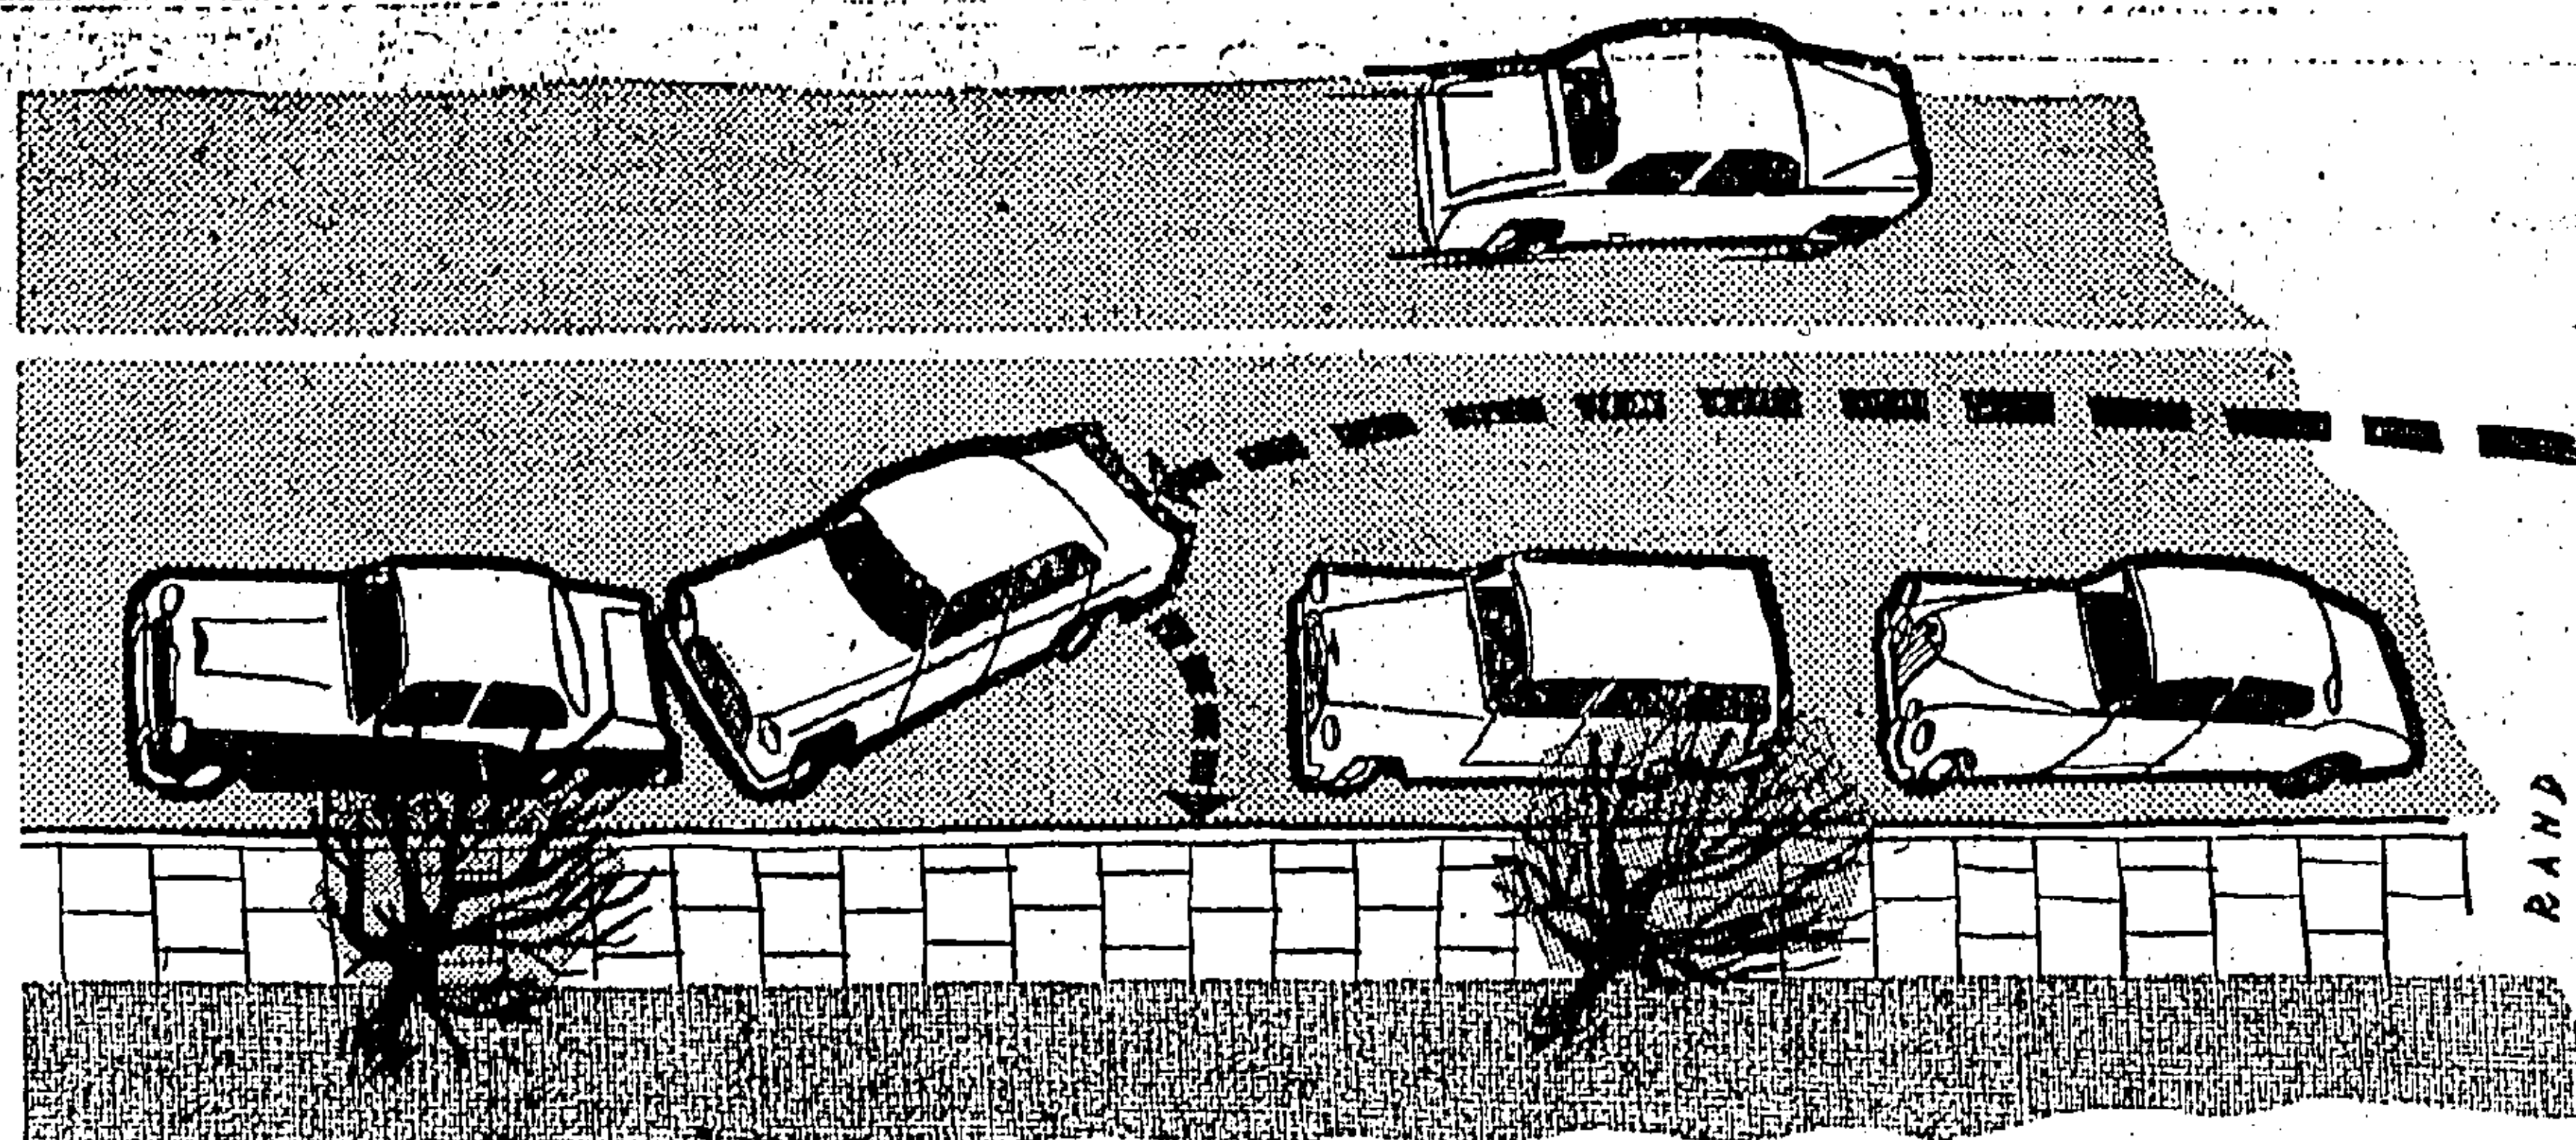

"But with our crab-like invention a car can be parked with only a foot to spare. We reckon that will bring joy to women drivers for shopping and to business men who park in the usual crowded streets."

In This Factory 1 In 3 Workers Drives To Work

I WISH Mr Gaitskell had come with me to the steelworks on the banks of the Dee. There would have been so much to talk about on the way home.

I wonder if Mr Gaitskell would be quite as fervent about nationalising steel after talking to all sorts of people who work in it?

There is no reason to suppose that this place, barely three miles outside the boundaries of historic Chester, is out of step with the rest of the industry.

£1,000 a year

MR RICHARD SUMMERS, the chairman of the company, was driving me through his works when I commented how odd it was to see a car park around the corner of almost every building. Finding more space for motor-cars was going to be a problem, he said. Whose cars?

He looked at me in some surprise. Why, he said, the people who work here. Then he explained that so big is this site—it stretches over 10,000 acres, though so far buildings, offices, mills, furnaces and coke ovens occupy only about one-quarter of the Summers land—that every vehicle bears a special label to speed its coming and going through the patrolled gates. There are 10,000 working here. Nearly 3,200 labels have been issued. Nearly one-third come to work in motor cars or on motor cycles, I thought. Mr. Summers was talking loosely, in general terms. He wasn't.

There are 2,100 motor-cars, and 1,019 motor-cycles. New applications are coming in daily.

First hands at the furnaces frequently take home more than £30 a week. The odd one has been known to take home £40 at peak periods, and the average for all is £15 a week, with most of the production boys in the £1,000 a year class.

The word

IT was during our discussion about future expansion plans that I mentioned THE WORD. Mr Summers was explaining how the present production of 1,000,000 tons of steel, mainly in sheets for motor-cars, drums and such household goods as refrigerators and washing machines, would be up to nearly 2,000,000 tons a year in about five years' time, when I said it.

I asked: "But what about renationalisation?" There was more sorrow than anger in his reaction. He shrugged his shoulders and said: "We go ahead, whatever happens."

So I asked what difference nationalisation had made when it was tried by the last Socialist Government. Hardly any at all. The firm still went ahead. And then Mr Summers observed casually: "Our people didn't mind when they realised that they would continue to negotiate with us." And by our people he meant his "10,000 workers, many of whom vote Socialist."

* * *

I MET a few of the leading trade union men at the plant. I failed to find any strong advocate of steel nationalisation. One of the most impressive men I met at Shotton was Mr Walter Jones, leading member of the steelmen's union, and vice-chairman of the joint advisory committee at the works.

A thoughtful, deliberate kind of man with more than 40 years' service at the plant, I asked him what his members thought of nationalisation. He said they were not interested in it. And he explained, "Of course, we couldn't have better people to work for."

They, management and workers, have known each other long enough. This is very largely a two-sided family affair. It was old John Summers who inspired all this. He used to make clogs in Stalybridge, Cheshire, more than 100 years ago.

He decided to make his own nails, so he made rough steel sheets.

His son, Henry Hall Summers, bought this black land on the banks of the Dee in the thirties of last century because it was near Liverpool where the ore came in, and from where exports could be shipped.

And Henry's son, Richard, is now the head of the concern, with two of his sons, Peter and Tim, already in the business.

There are all sorts of joint organisations on all aspects from production and wages, to safety and sports.

* * *

THIS plant, like most others in steel, has a remarkable record of internal peace. There was a dispute in 1934—between two unions.

So the Socialist planners can hardly claim they want to nationalise steel because it has a bad record of industrial relations. Nor can they say it is poorly paid.

I saw no evidence on the Dee of a demand for nationalisation from the workers in steel.

I saw ample evidence of expansion for the future, even to reclaiming land from the tidal water by battering down the refuse from the plant, thus adding a bit more to Wales.

There is in the Socialist new plan for nationalisation, a promise that a firm which does well by the nation will not be taken over. Obviously, that promise will not apply to steel.

Yet, what can be wrong with an industry which commands the energy and loyalty of a lifetime's service from men of pride and skill?

An Industrial Reporter issues this challenge to every industry in Britain.

This Long Suit Was Misleading

By OSWALD JACOBY

TAKE a look at the South hand. It's a pretty good one. Nine sure tricks at no-trump and first round control of three suits. If you are the first bidder it is surely worth a forcing two bid.

However, you happen to be second hand and East has opened with a bid of one club. You still have the same good hand but how should you bid it?

In a recent New Orleans duplicate most South players chose to double or to bid two clubs.

Now take a look at the North hand. Not much of a hand but a nice seven card spade suit. Inevitably after South doubled or cue bid in clubs North would bid spades.

indefinitely and the partnership would up going down at some high score contract.

The only pair to play the simple no-trump game were Sidney Lazard, one of our top young players, and June, his wife.

June has only been playing bridge two years but with Sidney's teaching she is well on her way to becoming a top woman player.

One of the points that Sidney has stressed and which all experts stress is that when your opponents open the bidding you don't ask your partner to bid unless you are ready for a major suit response.

Hence, June did make a strong bid but one that did not ask Sidney to take any action. She simply bid three no-trump.

Sidney looked over his seven spades wistfully but decided to pass. He assumed that his wife knew what she was doing and was correct. West chose to open a heart and when the suit was continued she made four odd.

YOUR BIRTHDAY ... By STELLA

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 27

BORN today, you have been given a number of talents and your main difficulty may be in selecting the one you wish to develop. You must be warned against spreading your interests over too many fields. You may not achieve the best possible results. In an age of specialization, you will find it wise to concentrate on a single objective; finish it and then go on to something else. Once you have done this, you will find that the road to success is much easier.

Rather impatient of those whose minds may not work as quickly as yours, you probably will find that you do your best work when you are your own boss. You find it much too restricting to work under someone else. You have many of the qualifications for leadership and you should develop them, for in leading others, your best talents will be utilized.

Although you like to believe that you are unemotional and act on reason alone, the truth is, you are, at heart, emotional, enthusiastic, and, at times, even impulsive. You have tried to restrain these instincts. This is not wise, for in being yourself rather than a cold, self-contained individual, you are able to put drama and colour into your ideas. You have the power to influence others. Make sure that you use this gift at all times. Since you are a perfectionist in your work, you are also something of an idealist when it comes to selecting your life partner. There is much to be said for being particular. If you are, you may miss out. Compromise a little and you may grasp unexpected happiness and contentment.

Among those born on this date were: Charles A. Beard, historian; Francis I. Schaeffer, actor; Margaret Lang, composer; Artemus Ward and Louis Bromfield, authors; William Henry Wood, shipbuilder; Albert P. Jellison, artist; Ted Flaming, sports announcer, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, financier.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—Social aspects of this day are highly important to your happiness, whether entertaining or being entertained.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—Moderation—even in the amount of sleep—is the wisest plan if you are to enjoy the entire day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—It plans have been well-made, then all goes well in your house and everything is harmonious and enjoyable.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—Let it be hoped you left no last-minute details to make your Thanksgiving dinner a splendid success.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 20)—Early morning and evening hours are the best for you—probably the most relaxing. The in-between hours will be pretty busy!

Taurus (Apr. 21-May 21)—If all arrangements are well under control, you can spend a pleasant and happy relaxing day with your family.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—Do careful details from your planning and you will find that everything goes along splendidly.

CANCER (June 22-July 21)—No last-minute rushing around. If you are to be a relaxed host or hostess, have everything ready ahead of time.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 21)—You can avoid mishap due to carelessness if you follow your originally scheduled plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 22-Sept. 21)—If you are fortunate enough to have the last holiday week-end, then take full advantage of it by getting out of town.

LIBRA (Sept. 22-Oct. 21)—Forethought can make this a pleasantly relaxed day for you. Avoid overdoing it, however.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21)—By using your executive abilities at home instead of at the office, you can execute today's programme efficiently.

EAST IS LOOKING WEST FOR NEW BEAUTY IDEAS

JAPANESE WOMEN like American clothes, says Milko Taka, Seattle-born movie star. She reverses trend, models a Japanese costume.

By JEANNE D'ARCY

WHO says "Never the twain shall meet!" According to Milko Taka, Seattle-born Japanese movie star, it isn't so. In feminine matters, beauty and fashion, East is going West as fast as possible.

Exotic American

Milko, who's an exotic American, visited Japan recently, where her grandmother lives and where she took starring honours in the film version of "Sayonara." With her co-star, Marlon Brando, she saw Far Eastern life at first hand, had a chance to observe it closely as a Westerner.

In a telephone interview from California, she told us her reactions to the visit.

"Japanese women," she said, "are greatly influenced by American styles. Western dresses are the thing. They wear kimonos in the winter, but their summer dresses are just like those you see in New York or in Hollywood."

According to Milko, Japanese women are even going along with Western hair styles. "Why, if you don't have a permanent wave in Tokyo," she observed, "you're just old-fashioned. Many women are dyeing their hair, too. Red is the big colour. But personally, I think it's a shame to change that beautiful black hair. It's such a wonderful shade."

We asked Milko about the weight problem, a major obsession with American females. But it's no dilemma in Japan.

"You hardly ever see a fat Japanese," she said. "They're on the slim side. I can't tell you the secret, but you might be interested to know that their diet contains very little meat. They're great eaters of fish, rice and of vegetables."

First Course Is Dessert

As an interesting afterthought she mentioned that dessert (a sweet pastry) is the first course of a Japanese meal.

"Maybe," she said, "that takes the edge off the appetite."

Milko thinks American women are far more fashion-minded—but the Japanese are getting there fast, she says. Still, the Oriental woman, she noted, has an advantage over her American sister.

"She's taught," observed Milko, "that a man is everything. And that's an attitude every man likes."

The Lady In Black—Leather

• SUEDE has swept out of town—but now LEATHER is getting a good look in. The big Paris stores are filling their windows with short white and pastel kid coats but most popular are the full-length black leather numbers—some straight, some belted with metal buttons, some lined with brilliant scarlet.

They are warm, more practical, and can look very dressy. And—whatever they say—there is no comparison between them and the imitation kind that sat itself on acetone a few years ago.

They are trickling into this country already—I've seen two this week, both full length. You can get them in any London store soon.

Willy Makes A Promise

—Told Vows Never To Be A Hog, Again—

By MAX TRELL

THE Magic Telephone in the Phrymson rang.

Knarf and Hanid, The Shadows With The Turned-About Names, squeezed behind the bookcase, pushed inside the curtain and grabbed the phone.

It was about as big as without but it had two mouthpieces and two ear-pieces. It was a very convenient Magic Telephone.

Knarf and Hanid both said at once: "Hello! Who's there?"

It was their friend Willy Tood.

"I've got a tummyache," said Willy. "Get me a doctor!"

Quick!

Faded Mushroom

Knarf and Hanid dashed out of the house, ran down the stone steps, cut into the grove of Pine Trees and there, sitting under a faded mushroom, and groaning, was their friend Willy.

Willy had his hands folded over his tummy. He looked miserable and unhappy.

"Where's the doctor?" groaned Willy.

"He'll be here in a minute, dear," said Hanid.

"What happened to you?" asked Knarf. "Does your stomach really hurt as much as you're trying to make us think it does?"

"It's awful," said Willy. "And it's my fault. It's all because of something I ate the middle of next week."

Knarf and Hanid gave Willy a look of astonishment.

Say It Again

"Say that again, Willy," said Hanid. "I don't think we heard you right."

"Did you say it was something you ate the middle of next week?" asked Knarf.

"That's what I said," said Willy.

"But how could something you ate the middle of next week give you a tummyache now? It isn't next week yet! It isn't the middle of next week yet!"

"I don't care what it is," said Willy. "I've got a tummyache be a Pig!"

Rupert and Rusty—38

The silent watchers have not long to wait. They hear a stumbling footstep close behind them, then the cupboard door is flung open and a heavy figure strides out. "Oh, it's him! It's the stranger!" gasps Rupert. The new comer wings round, but at the sight of Rupert's companion he checks himself and stares in amazement while the old gentleman folds his arms and looks equally astonished. "So it's you! After all these years," says the old man sternly. "And what is your game now?"

THEY PEDDLE PEP PILLS TO THEIR PLAYERS

The spotlight this week shines on Pte Roydon Thomas of 6 Composite Ordnance Depot who, by winning the Garrison Cross-country race over a difficult four-mile course in the excellent time of 28 minutes 25.7 seconds, set a good example to the remaining members of his unit team who, packing well, romped home easy winners of the team event to maintain this unit's reputation as the leading exponents of this sport.

This was Roydon's first essay at running the hard way, and his first success. Judging from his style and the time he registered he should find both over the country and distance track events a rewarding hobby. In individual second position came Gnr Fred Allison who has featured in Army and HKAAA competitions on many occasions, while the third position went to Gnr. Oxford of 74 LAA Regt. RA.

To the COD's top total of 65 points, the following major unit 74 LAA Regt RA with 100 points, while third place went to Command Workshop REME with 153 points, and these were followed by new-comers to this sport who all put up a very creditable showing in 33 General Hospital (172), 2 Supply Depot (206), 113 Provost Coy (214) and Command Pay Office (216) points.

I look forward to seeing these teams meet again with those of the Territories units, on the Land Forces individual and team championships which will be held at San Wei next Wednesday, December 4, over a longer course of about six miles.

I shall be surprised if COD do not add this honour to their long list of successes, and once more become the Minor Units Champions. The Major Units title is very open and I won't even hazard a guess at the ultimate winners.

All Army football referees are reminded that the monthly meeting will be held at the NAAFI Club, Chatham Road, next Saturday, November 30, commencing at 10.0 hrs.

It is hoped that all will attend and take up refereeing or learning a bit more about the laws of the game will be welcome at the discussion which follows the Association's general business.

Hockey

In senior hockey circles there has been a slight pause while teams get ready for the quarter-finals of the knockout competition, and only a few League matches were arranged during the week.

1/10 Gurli Rifles proved too good for 74 LAA Regt RA by 6-4 and the 1/10 Green Howards had two outings, defeating HQ 2-0 in a really good game, and sharing two goals with the RASC in a game that produced a lot of good hockey from both sides.

The last of these League encounters found the Hongkong Signal Rifles, rather too good for the 24 Field Engineer Regt RE who went down by 5-2.

Glowing with the success of forecasting the correct results of three out of the four matches played in the first round of the Minor Units knockout competition, I can still expect a 100 per cent success as the outcome of the fourth match was a draw, 11 Inf Workshops REME allowing the Command Pay Office to hold them to a 2-2 draw after extra time in a thrilling packet encounter.

If the hockey at times fell below first class standards, the spirit and enthusiasm of the players certainly never flagged and it was good to see a team so inferior on paper rising to the occasion and nearly pulling off the surprise of the hockey season. The replay is something you should not miss.

District Workshops REME, who made rather heavy work of the 83 General Hospital by a single goal in the league encounter, made no mistake in their cup clash with 101 Battery RA and went "nap" while sister unit Command Workshop REME were three goals superior to Hongkong Signals.

The last match in the first round was a very keen affair, with the superlative of 3 COD just turning the tables on a youthful GRC eleven who gave a very good account of the two-goal deficit.

The draw for the quarter-final has been made and resulted in 22 Battery RA entertaining 3 COD and 1 rear the Quarry guards will prove an extremely tough test.

Athletes Should Compete Against Each Other As Men—Not Guinea Pigs

Says DEREK JOHN

Doped animals used to be the exclusive headache of those who controlled racing—horse and greyhound. Now the day seems to be coming when football and other sports bosses will have to interest themselves in the question.

The other week six Manchester United players each took a benzedrine tablet before winning their European Cup-tie against Czech side Dukla. Several League team managers cheerfully admit that they peddle pep pills to their players before big games.

The effect may be largely psychological. But not wholly. The US Medical Association denounces the "shock and awe" practice of American athletes, including some still at high school, taking amphetamine, a drug which includes benzedrine.

They say it can become habit-forming, and could cause violence in a highly-strung person. The dividing line between legitimate stimulants, such as alcohol and dope is thin. But it must be drawn, and drawn firmly.

Teams and players should compete against each other as men, not as guinea pigs. Fitness and stamina must be induced by training, not by the hypodermic syringe.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Calling All Gremlins

To The Editor, China Mail. Sir—Many of your readers may have heard and enjoyed the interview given recently by two most charming ladies during Sports Cavalcade over Radio Hongkong. The ladies were the Captains of KGV and Gremlins Ladies Hockey teams.

We admire greatly the teams who play in the Hongkong Ladies Hockey League, particularly the "Gallant Gremlins." We enjoyed hearing those two ladies on the radio and think they did rather well. But, it failed us deeply to hear the Gremlins Captain claim an unbeaten record for her team. Lesser spirits would take deep umbrage, Sir, but we shall be content to let the record stand.

On January 27 of this year, at King's Park, our "Ladies" Hockey Team met and decisively routed the Gremlins (who then included the present Capt. of KGV). The Gremlins claim (and we believe most unfairly) that we infringed every rule in the book. Let your readers be our judges. Where in the rules of hockey does it state that forward passes shall not ride Vespa's? Is there any rule which prevents the removal of goal posts when attacked? Is it not a goal when a forward plays the ball fairly into his top hat and nets the lot? Do the laws prohibit defence of goal with fire extinguishers, rockets and firecrackers?

Unorthodox methods, yes Sir, but illegal? Never. It is this very unorthodoxy which has enabled us to retain our unbeaten record, and to entertain the most discriminating spectators.

However, should the Gremlins care to try again, we are ready. We will be most pleased to meet them at a place and date to be agreed mutually, and hope, Sir, to be in a position to notify you accordingly in the near future.

The proceeds of all productions of this organisation are devoted to the welfare of poor children, and towards this end, we feel sure the Gremlins will, as before, prepare for battle.

THE KAI TAK SUPERSONICS.

A world famous sportsman wants to see one branch of his sport banned. He is racing him recently. He said: "Boxing is in a terrible state. There are no top-quality fighters because there are not enough incentives to learn the fundamentals."

"With the Foundation we shall be able to take kids who want to learn and put them on salary—pay 50 bucks a week—and look after them until they graduate. We would emphasize the wonderful side of boxing—not the gambling and the bad boys."

Dempsey, thicker, ruddier, but still looking strong enough to knock you down with a careless movement, is determined to make this project work.

My own view is that American boxing gets stimulated any more, the rest of the world can forget about titles altogether.

Sad news for the tennis world. From Australia I hear that muscle-man Vic Seixas is seriously considering packing up the game at championship level.

He has been thinking of it for some time. At 34, he realises that he is slowing up considerably and feels it his business to get out of the game before he becomes a full-time business man when he leaves Australia early next year.

What a loss this will be to amateur tennis! Seixas, a crew-cut American who took up tennis at the age of five, has long been one of the great entertainers in first-class tournaments. And he is a great amateur, having strongly resisted persistent offers to turn professional.

Now he hopes to end his playing career with a triumph appearance in the Davis Cup Challenge Round against Australia.

In 1954 he helped to break Australia's run of four victories in the Davis Cup, taking the cup to the United States in a upset in the Davis Cup doubles at Christmas.

However, I expect the Cup to remain in Australia for the third year in succession.

Another Star

While the lion-hearted Seixas is planning to retire, I hear that another American star is planning a comeback. She is Mrs. Beverly Baker-Fleitz, the attractive, ambitious Californian, who was runner-up in the 1955 Wimbledon Championship.

This is really welcome news since it means that Althea Gibson may not have everything her own way in next year's major championships.

This year Miss Gibson has reigned supreme as the Queen of Tennis; she has not been beaten since last January. Such a one-sided situation is not good for the game.

Now Mrs. Fleitz has beaten most of the world's best women players, including the great Maureen "Ma" Connolly. And she might have won the Wimbledon title in 1956 if she had not had to retire at the quarter-final stage after discovering that she was expecting another baby.

Mrs. Fleitz reached the semi-final when she made her debut at Wimbledon in 1951. Later that year she married Johnny Fleitz, a former baseball star. The arrival of her first baby, now aged four, ended her tennis for a time. But she returned to Wimbledon in 1955 and only lost to Louise Brough in the final after two close sets.

Hongkong Invited For Far East Open Golf Tournament

The top professional golfers of 14 countries are expected to participate when the sixth Far East Open Golf Championship is held here from January 18 to 19.

Japan's Torakichi "Pete" Nakamura, recent upset winner of the International Trophy, has been invited.

Of the 13 countries asked to send their entries, the Chinese Nationalists in Formosa, were the first to reply and will send a seven-man golf team.

The top prize is US$3,000, US$1,500 to the runner-up, and US$1,000 for the third-placed man.

The countries invited were Hongkong, the United States, the Chinese Nationalists in Formosa, Japan, Korea, Australia, Singapore, Malaya, Thailand, Guam, Hawaii, South Africa and Britain. — France-Press.

Hungarian Wins Zonal Chess Tournament

Wageningen, Holland, Nov. 26. Hungary's Szabo won the European second zone tournament for the World Chess Championships which ended here today. He scored 13.5 points.

Iceland's Olafsson was second with 13 points and Denmark's Larsen led with Holland's Donner for third place with 12.5 points each.

The first three qualify for the inter-zonal tournament to be held in Yugoslavia in 1958.

Larsen and Donner will have to meet in a deciding match on the 14th of December. Chess Federation accepts the Netherlands Federation's request that both should qualify for the inter-zonal final. — France-Press.

Joe Erskine Will Meet Swede In Next Fight

London, Nov. 26. A confident Joe Erskine, almost unmarked after his brilliant Empire heavyweight title win over Jamaican Joe Hyatt at Leicester last night, is looking forward to a busy time in the ring in the immediate future.

Erskine, now holder of the British and Empire Heavyweight Championships, will next meet Ingemar Johansson of Sweden for the latter's European title.

This fight has been secured for Sweden and Mr. Benny Jacobs, Erskine's manager, said today: "I hope to get it disposed of as soon as possible so that Joe can be matched with the American, Willie Pastrano." — France-Press.

NATAL HOLD AUSTRALIANS TO AN EXCITING DRAW

Richie Benaud In Fine Form

Durban, Nov. 26. Natal held the Australian cricketers to an exciting draw at Kingsmead here today, having an innings defeat six minutes from the drawing of stumps.

Needling 214 to make Australia bat again after the Australians declared yesterday at 309 for six, Natal — out for 147 in their first innings — lost eight wickets for 215 but then held out to reach 238.

An unchanged bowling spell by Richie Benaud nearly won the match for the Australians, but the 22-year-old Chris Burger, playing a mature innings of 42 not out, kept out the tourists.

HIS BEST FORM

Last season the luckless Burger got four successive ducks against the MCC, but in a stay of 106 minutes today he showed his best form.

At one stage it seemed that nobody would stay with him, but Paul Randles, the wicketkeeper, remained long enough to make 25 before being eighth wicket down, and then Peter Dadds (not out 9) stood firm until stumps were drawn.

Today confirmed the fine form of Benaud with the ball. In Natal's first innings he finished with figures of seven for 46, and today he had six for 88 — giving him a match analysis of 13 wickets for 134 runs.

There was great excitement as Natal's eight wicket fell at 215, still seven runs behind, but they knocked off the arrears without further loss, and with six minutes remaining.

The ninth wicket pair stayed together during the remaining time to draw the match. — China Mail Special.

That Soccer Hiding Was A Spur To England

Says ALAN HOBY

Thank you, Danny Blanchflower—and thank you, Peter Doherty! Your leadership, the way you inspired that fighting Irish team at Wembley, knocked the cockiness out of casual England—while there is still time to rebuild for the World Cup!

But shame on you Walter Winterbottom, for saying, in your capacity as England team manager, that "if ever there was luck, the Irish had it."

"Luck." Mr. Winterbottom? It was a licking they gave us, and there's no use trying to excuse it away.

Indeed, I call England the lucky ones—for being able to profit from a lesson in disaster.

Underlined

As a football writer I am particularly grateful to those wonderful Irishmen for doubly underlining what I wrote in my Wembley preview—

"That the England 'double centre forward' World Cup plan is as dead as Guy Fawkes. Scrap it before it is too late. What England wants are footballers—not goal-poachers."

That neither Derek Keown nor Tommy Taylor is clicking. Now bring in Ronnie Allen or Jim Murray of Wolves at centre forward AND—if the selectors have the courage—play either young Greaves or that old fox Tom Finney at INSIDE RIGHT against France on November 27.

Good FOOTBALLERS—as Red Army and Real Madrid have proved—can play ANYWHERE.

As for Danny Blanchflower himself, he is one of the really great players of British football.

Since John Charles was lost to Italy you could put them all in one cab—but there, occupying a front seat, would be Danny, that unquenchable Irish character with the intellectual feet.

Together with Ireland's uninhibited team boss, flamboyant Peter Doherty, Danny stamped his personality on the Wembley match—and what a multi-faceted dynamic personality it is!

No yapping yes-man in a game cramped with them, Danny of the intelligent grey eyes and wide Irish smile will stick to his principles, stick or swim.

For instance, discerning critics are now asking: "How is it that

I'll tell you something else about my friend Danny Blanchflower.

Because he is 50 and wants to go on as long as Stanley Matthews, Danny—characteristically—reported back for training a fortnight ahead of his Tottenham teammates before the start of the season.

He is a man of firm opinions as well as principles. This is what he says about his fellow-footballers and the game in general—

"The average player is still controlled. He can still be sold like a bale of cotton. He still can't negotiate his own private contract with a club."

"Yes, he gets a raw deal, and I sometimes think it's because he has a weakness, which his backbone should be. He wants for things instead of demanding them."

Personally, I think soccer and soccer players should be grateful that there are still one or two refreshingly independent personalities out there. I would like to see 20,000 Robert Dadds.

Ontario, Nov. 26.
The Russian ice hockey team at present touring Canada staged a walkout last night from a wrestling match in an auditorium here.

The team had been watching the bouts of professional wrestling for about an hour when they left at a signal from their manager, Col Pavel Korokov. "That's not wrestling. It's a circus," Mr. Roman Kislov, the team's interpreter, commented.—China Mail Special.

CLIFF MORGAN TO RETIRE

Last Rugby Season For
The Most Talked-About
Sportsman In Wales

By ERIC NICHOLLS

CLIFF MORGAN

The most talked about sportsman in Wales at present is a dark-haired, lively-eyed man by the name of Cliff Morgan. Among sports-loving folk down Cardiff way he has even superseded the coming of the British Empire Games to the city as the chief topic of conversation. For Welsh rugby enthusiasts—in other words ninety-nine per cent of the population—have been saddened by the news that this is the last season of Morgan, the magnificent little maestro from the Rhondda Valley.

At the ripe old age of 27, he has decided to retire from the game and devote his time to his business interests. This is the last season we shall see in action the man who rates as one of the greatest fly-halves of all time and the top personality of British Rugby Union today.

Morgan's departure will be mourned wherever rugby is played. For he is far more than the great hero of the Welsh. He is the idol of rugby fans the world over.

In ten years he has progressed from Towyrefall in Trickerham, from the vale of Rhondda to the veldt of South Africa. His rugby genius has delighted the citizens of Cape Town as much as the crowds of Cardiff Arms Park.

Brief Career

Cliff Morgan's rugby career has been brief but more than brilliant. Starting as an international six years ago, he has already gained 26 caps. And he has won the honour which every Welsh schoolboy dreams of—the captaincy of his country at rugby.

It would be impossible to relate in this limited space all his wonderful achievements. Morgan was incapable of playing a really bad game. Whatever the occasion, he would give his best.

But I would recall just two golden periods in his career—the 1953 season, when the mighty New Zealand All Blacks toured Britain, and the 1955 season when the British Lions toured South Africa.

Most experts are agreed that the game at Cardiff Arms Park on November 21, 1953, was the greatest match of the season. On that day, the All Blacks suffered their one and only defeat against a club side.

Chief Architect

The club was Cardiff and the chief architect of their remarkable victory was Cliff Morgan. He was sensational.

His amazing turn of speed and deceptive body-swerve threw the highly experienced New Zealand defence into confusion. Sometimes beating four players in almost as many yards, he split the defence wide open and burst through self-created gaps.

The plan was to strike in the early stages, to score before the All-Blacks knew what hit them. And it worked. In the seventh minute Morgan hared away with the ball from his own 25-yard line.

When an All-Black came up to tackle, Morgan punted over his head, ran round him, caught the ball, and ran on again. A pass to that elusive three-quarter Bledwyn Williams, a pass back to Morgan, a pass to right-wing Rowlands, a cross kick, and Cardiff were over the line.

This was the vital move of the game. Cardiff won by a goal and try to a penalty goal, and 50,000 cheering Welsh voices resounded from the great Arms Park arena. It was Cardiff's game. But it was Morgan's match.

Morgan rose to even greater heights on the British Lions' 1955 tour of South Africa. With his amazing speed and brilliant tactics, he, more than any other player, was responsible for the two great victories over the Springboks.

This was a tremendous achievement. The Springboks had held the unofficial World Rugby Championship since 1937 and had not been beaten in an international Test since 1909.

Morgan, who was rated the greatest fly-half ever seen in South Africa, skipped the Lions in one of their Test victories. And the following January, in his 16th international, he was chosen to lead his own country for the first time. Wales beat England 8-3.

Yet Cliff Morgan will not be remembered for particular performances so much as for his own individual style, which automatically raised the entertainment value of every match in which he played.

Morgan, a miner's son, was made for rugby. On the field, his mind is 100 per cent on the task in hand.

He puts everything into his game and is always on the move... watching for openings, poised for the sprint, moving his hands in eager anticipation of receiving the ball.

Special Tricks

Besides doing everything expected of a great fly-half, he has several special tricks of his own. Never a man to be anticipated, Morgan may sidestep a tackler, jump over his arms, or duck under them.

He has been known to run round ten men within 20 yards. And in a 1955 Welsh trial he was so elusive that no one laid a finger on him throughout the game.

The most important Morgan assets are tremendous speed and acceleration.

Yet, strangely enough, he played soccer at school because his masters thought him too small for rugby. And at his National Service medical examination he was graded unfit for service because he had pleurisy.

Today, Cliff Morgan is 5ft. 7in. and 12st. 2lb., one of the fittest, fastest men in the game. Ever since leaving school he has lived for rugby, and nothing has been able to tempt him away from Rugby Union.

As the most sought-after rugby player in Britain, Morgan has had tempting offers from Rugby League professional clubs, from rugby-minded businessmen in South Africa, even from Cardiff City, the English League Football Club. But he has turned them all down.

Morgan is the true amateur, who plays the game for pleasure, not for cash. A good clubman, he has a lively wit, a pleasing tenor voice, and a piano-playing style well-suited for after-the-match sing-songs in the local.

Why, then, is he leaving the sport he loves so much?

As a family man with a sense of responsibility, he says: "One must think of the future, and being a Rugby Union star doesn't feed my family."

The volatile Welshman was married two years ago—to a red-haired Irish air hostess, Nuala Martin.

Cliff Morgan hopes to have a really successful last season and to retire while still in his prime. His departure will mean that Britain has lost its two top sporting personalities within a year.

Just as Lord's Cricket Ground does not seem the same without Denis Compton, so Cardiff Arms Park will seem a poorer place without the unforgettable Morgan.

Musician Had To 'Bring' Her Piano With Her

Kampala, Nov. 26.
Making a concert tour in some of the remote parts of Africa is strenuous and full of surprises,
but more satisfying than playing to "blase"
London audiences.

That, at any rate, is the opinion of Miss Yvonne Cat-terall, internationally known to concert audiences, who has just completed a 2,000-mile tour in East Africa.
She found, however, that a pianist in this part of the world must also know how to tune her own piano—and on more than one occasion was obliged to spend an hour or two inside the piano to bring it up to something like a correct pitch.

Discovered

The daughter of the late British violinist, Arthur Cat-terall, Miss Catterall now lives in Uganda, where her husband is the warden of one of the halls of residence of Makerere College, East Africa's University College.

Her concert tour took her to Mwanza, at the southern end of Lake Victoria, where no pianist has ever given a recital before.
There was not even a piano in the town, Miss Catterall said when she arrived back at her home.

"But the local Provincial Commissioner there was so keen on music that he secured the countryside—and discovered a piano belonging to the District Commissioner, on Ukerewe Island, 50 miles away in Lake Victoria.

Radio Message

"So an urgent radio message was sent to the island, saying
"can you come to concert and bring piano?"

The instrument was packed up in crates, loaded on to the local steamer, and shipped to Mwanza, where it then had to be pushed up a steep hill to the school where the concert was to be given. After the concert, it was re-packed and sent back to its island home on board the steamer.

At Kisumu, where Miss Catterall had to give two recitals to meet the local demand, two Africans travelled 90 miles from their homes to hear her play. The piano which she used there had once been installed in Addis Ababa, later making the long journey down
the East African coast and across Kenya.

Tuned Piano

"For the first time in my life, I had to attempt to tune
my own piano on this tour," Miss Catterall said. "It was quite frightening—but quite an experience. When I next go to England I shall take some lessons in piano tuning. They are sure to be in useful."

What impressed her most about bringing music to remote places in Africa was the enthusiastic response which she got from her audiences. "It was a wonderful experience," she declared.—China Mail Special.

The Dilemma Of The Italian Policeman 'FRISK OR BE DEAD'

By HORACE CASTELL

Rome, Nov. 26.

Murder at police headquarters here has set Italian police a major problem—whether to fight a new law safeguarding the citizens, or to leave themselves open to possibly violence by criminals.

The law forbids the police to search anyone taken to headquarters for questioning without permission from the chief of the department.
This means that, as happened recently, a criminal can carry a revolver—and use it—without the police being able to protect themselves.

The law was one of a series approved by Parliament in the past five years following complaints that police were over-tough and sometimes "unconstitutional" in their dealings with people.

Unlimited

The old Fascist laws gave the police practically unlimited power. They could, for instance, (and did) subject a man or woman to a careful search if they happened to be in the vicinity of a riot, or at their homes if a theft occurred next door, or at police headquarters if they were accidentally near the scene of one of the weekly police anti-vice raids.

Up to about five years ago,
there were frequent allegations in court that police used "third degree" methods to "persuade"
a suspected person to confess to a crime. And there was one sensational case in which a defendant, alleged by the police to have made a full confession of a sex murder, was found not guilty by the court.

During the not infrequent riots, the police shock squads sent scores of innocent bystanders to hospital with their speeding jeeps and short,
wooden truncheons.

But in the past few years police methods have become notably milder. During the periodical anti-vice sweeps, checks are made to ensure a must innocent people being taken to prison for several days, as used to happen in the past.

And in riots, the police,
with a few recent exceptions, are not as indiscriminate as in the past in their use of truncheons and submachineguns.

All Italian police are still armed with a revolver. The riot squads also have trun-cheons, submachine guns, rifles and often hand-grenades attached to their belts.

They have to be armed for quarrels are known nearly always to carry revolvers or submachine-guns.

This habit, according to the police, is largely responsible for Italy's annual murder rate of just over 1,500 people. "An armed criminal," said a police official recently, "will invariably kill to save his skin."

The new law against searching unsuspected persons is now being blamed by the police for an unprecedented murder in the heart of the massive grey building which houses Rome's police headquarters.

A 35-year-old unemployed Italian was picked up by the police on the suspicion that he planned to hold up an ex-professional football player.

The man was driven to police headquarters and taken up to the fourth floor office of Rome's traffic and tourist police division.

Powerful

For 45 minutes, the mild-looking but powerful man was in an anti-room waiting to be called into the office of the assistant chief of the department, Dr. Antonino Troisi.

Dr. Troisi asked him for the usual details—name, age, address. The man's answers were drawn from an inside pocket of his well-cut sports jacket and fire all eight bullets at the police in the room.

A bullet entered the heart of a sergeant, 35-year-old Vittorio Camerini, who died a few minutes later. Dr. Troisi himself was hit three times and may lose the use of his right arm. Constable Natale Minnola was wounded in the thigh.

Another policeman, Cesare Cecconi, was hit twice and has since been taken to a mental hospital for special treatment.
Policemen who burst into rooms overpowered the man.
After treatment of various face injuries he was taken to Rome's Regina Coeli (Queen of Heaven) prison to await trial on charges of murder and attempted murder.

New Law

A high police officer told reporters bitterly during the sergeant's funeral: "In the old days, we should have searched the man. We should not have left him for 45 minutes in a police headquarters room with a fully loaded revolver in his pocket."

"The new law has made our primary task of crime prevention a joke."

"Hardened criminals sneer at us when we find them acting suspiciously and tell us: 'Hands off or I'll drag you to court.'"
And they go on their way, probably with a revolver in their pocket, ready for crime.

"The series of laws passed in the last few years allow us, in effect, to intervene only when a crime has been committed—when, for instance, it is too late to save a person from being murdered."

But newspapers are urging Italian legislators to stand firm for the new laws. Rome's influential, pro-government, newspaper, "Il Messaggero," wrote, in a front page leader
article:

"The police demonstrated a most praiseworthy sense of regard for a citizen's rights. A policeman has sacrificed his life.
Three others have suffered injury."

"But the new law should not be changed. The tragedy we witness here will give citizens a new sense of admiration for the police, and a new urge to co-operate with them, instead of the old fear and suspicion of anyone in police uniform."

A Book For Boys And Dad Also

"Boys' Book Of Flight" by David Le Roi in association with the Staff of Flight. Published by Higgs & Sons Ltd., Dorset House, Stamford Street, London S.E.1.
Price 12.6d net (postage extra).

PUBLISHERS nowadays are always stressing the point that the modern boy, if given a book, will not be put off with a book that skips all the "knowhow" details.

My only quarrel with that is boys always want to know all about the technical details of every modern invention, and come to that, a great deal of theory also, if put in language they could grasp, and illustrated in a straightforward manner.

The only difference between the boys of today and the boys of yesterday is, the modern boy is fortunate insofar that a whole generation of writers have grown up who specialise in presenting facts in an interesting and scientific manner.

A THESIS

Take for instance, the "Boys' Book of Flight" which is the book that the modern boy will have to wrest from the hands of his father. Precise, scientifically accurate, uncondescending, practical, it is exact as a scientific thesis, and as interesting as the finest adventure yarn.

It is a boy's dream of a flight book.

The author, David Le Roi, is a very experienced author of boys' books, he knows their language, and he gets down to brass tacks quickly. But in presenting this book, he has availed himself of the services of the leading aviation journal flight.

As a consequence, this book is illustrated with all the artistic, draftsmanship, and photographic skill flight has at its command.

PROGRESSIVE

There are 48 pages of superb art plates which illustrate the points made in the splendid arrangement of the book which takes us forward through the progressive stages of aviation.

Peter Twiss, the famous test pilot, contributes a foreword, and turning the pages we find by reach the border of the vast unknown which is rapidly toppling before the assault of scientific knowledge.

I can think of no book which would be more timely than out of every hundred boys. It is fascinating.—J. L.

ALLEGED MURDER IN NT

'Ferocious Attack' With Chopper Says Prosecution

The story of what was described by the Crown as a "ferocious attack" with a chopper by a farmer on his foki in an outlying district in Ping Shan, New Territories, was told when Lee Kam-kiu, 43, appeared on trial for murder before Mr Justice Scholes in the Criminal Sessions this morning.

The body of the deceased, Lee Hong, with 21 severe chop wounds on the head was found partially decomposed amongst some rocks on the sea-shore at the outskirts of a village in Ping Shan.

It is the case for the Crown that sometime following a quarrel over wages during which the deceased struck accused on the head with a stool, the accused sought out deceased and then chopped him to death, striking him at random on the head.

The alleged attack was said to have been seen by accused's step-son, whom accused took along with him that night in his quest for the deceased who lived in another part of the village.

Prosecution

Mr Desmond Mayne, Crown Counsel, assisted by Div. Det. Inspector J. M. Gurney, is prosecuting.

Accused is defended by Mr V. L. J. D'Alton, instructed by F. Zimmern and Company.

A jury of two men and five women has been empanelled. Mr Mayne told the jury that in the early hours of August 1 last, the body of the deceased was found lying amongst some rocks on the sea-shore on the outskirts of a village Kung Si Pak, in Ping Shan which was one of the outlying districts in the New Territories.

The body was found partially decomposed and had in all 21 severe chop wounds on the head. In addition there were 10 other wounds on the body and the Doctor who performed the post-mortem examination came to the conclusion that the cause of death was fracture of the skull and damage to the brain.

Mr Mayne said that it was clear that the deceased met his death as a result of an unusually ferocious attack upon him with some sharp instrument.

Crown Counsel said that Lee Hong had worked intermittently for the accused and had worked for him up to within a day of meeting his death.

A Farmer

Accused was a farmer and lived with his common law wife, a five-year-old daughter and a step-son, aged 14, in a house in the village. The boy was the son of the accused's wife by a previous marriage.

Mr Mayne said that sometime after the evening meal on July 30, the accused and the deceased had a quarrel relating to the wages which were due by the accused to the deceased in respect of the deceased's employment.

Accused gave the deceased a sum of $233 as wages but the deceased said that that was not enough.

"Things became very heated and the deceased picked up a stool and hit the accused on the head with it, causing him to bleed," said Crown Counsel.

A struggle ensued but the two men were separated by neighbours. Deceased went on his way, still apparently having in his possession this sum of money given to him by the deceased.

Sometime later that evening, the accused left the house, taking with him a chopper which was previously in the kitchen and a weight belonging to a weighing scale, the Prosecution said.

Took Boy

Accused also took the boy along and the evidence would be that the step-son was at that time in fear and was more or less forced to accompany the accused.

Mr Mayne said that during the night the accused and the boy came near a house of a man called Ho So, and not far from there they came upon the deceased.

Accused then began to chase after the deceased and the evidence would be that as the deceased turned right, after having come upon an obstruction blocking his flight, the accused struck him with great force on the head with the weight which was attached to a piece of string.

The deceased was knocked down but managed to regain his feet whereupon the accused allegedly chopped at him at random, mostly in the region of the head until eventually the deceased was killed, Mr Mayne said.

Blood Trail

After that the evidence would be that the body was dragged down to the sea-side where the accused extracted certain things from the pockets of the jacket the deceased was wearing.

The terrified boy then returned back home with the accused who told him not to mention anything about what had taken place.

Crown Counsel said that the body was found by reason of a blood trail which led from the place where the deceased was attacked down to the sea. Accused was subsequently arrested.

A chopper for cutting vegetables which was usually in the house was missing at the time of Police investigations. Later a chopper similar to the missing chopper was found half buried in the sand near the place where the body was found.

There was no doubt that accused suffered considerable provocation at the time of the quarrel on July 30, but provocation could never excuse homicide, although in certain cases it might reduce from what otherwise would be murder to manslaughter, said Mr Mayne.

Evidence

Crown Counsel submitted that there was clear evidence that the accused was guilty of a particularly ferocious form of murder.

Hearing is continuing.

Application For Exemption

An application concerning the exemption of Nos 23 and 25 Yiu Wa Street, Happy Valley was brought before the Tenancy Tribunal this morning.

The existing three-storeyed houses were described by Mr S. S. L. Yue, architect, as being in a poor state of repair. Two six-storeyed houses are to be erected in their place, taking seven months to build and costing $80,000.

Mr Ho said that he had purchased the property in August, 1957 for the purpose of redevelopment. He added that he had $120,000 in the bank to implement rebuilding. Representing the opposing tenants were Mr Patrick Yu, instructed by Messrs Brutton and Co., Mr F. H. B. Wong of Messrs C. Y. Kwan and Co. and Mr F. D'Almada of D'Almada and Mason.

The conference also strongly condemned job reservation and pledged full support to the stand taken by the workers. Dr. G. M. Nkomo was unanimously re-elected President of the "Natal Indian Congress."—France-Press.
